

perception humans and the relation with the tools that are built to attempt to understand these. I believe this effort expands thinking into a realm where the human is no longer in the centre of world forcing

perception humans and the relation with the tools that are built to attempt to understand these. I believe this effort expands thinking into a realm where the human is no longer in the centre of world forcing

perception humans and the relation with the tools that are built to attempt to understand these. I believe this effort expands thinking into a realm where the human is no longer in the centre of world forcing

perception humans and the relation with the tools that are built to attempt to understand these. I believe this effort expands thinking into a realm where the human is no longer in the centre of world forcing

perception humans and the relation with the tools that are built to attempt to understand these. I believe this effort expands thinking into a realm where the human is no longer in the centre of world forcing

perception humans and the relation with the tools that are built to attempt to understand these. I believe this effort expands thinking into a realm where the human is no longer in the centre of world forcing

perception humans and the relation with the tools that are built to attempt to understand these. I believe this effort expands thinking into a realm where the human is no longer in the centre of world forcing us to think in a third-person perspective - not only in the

